1 You're spending a lot of time (and money) manually preparing reports.

2 Data is difficult to access so you're not using everything available to you.

3 The volume of data is growing and becoming harder to manage.

4 There might be many data sources and arguments about whose data is the most accurate or trustworthy i.e. there's no 'single version of the truth'.

5 Reports don't fit with business requirements and it's difficult to adapt them for different departments and user levels.

6 People are complaining about delays in receiving their reports.

7 Only a few people have access to the data, reports and analysis.

8 Reports are difficult to understand.

9 Reporting metrics are not always consistent.
